Our ever popular silage pit mats, proven to produce better silage with their properties.

Well, they say things come in 3's, first Coronavirus, then Brexit and now the Suez Canal disruption, but there has also been positives - longer days, lockdown lifting and we are only a few days away from a well deserved bank holiday with a few Easter eggs maybe! March has been a busy month for Quattro, as we approach warmer weather, Flexscreed installation picks up, and as always, lots of fitting of matting in stables. We have also been installing a new home for an animal a little bigger than your standard horse or cow, the Elephants at West Midlands Safari Park have a brand new area installed with Flexscreed.

Silage time is fast approaching in the farming calendar and the Equine year has kicked off with Cheltenham festival this month, one of the biggest dates in the equine year. Lambs are starting to get out in the fields and sleepless nights checking stock is probably in full swing for many farmers as they are in their lambing and calving time. Slurry spreading will be ticking over too. Any maintenance and repairs will be ongoing, especially to silage and maize pits in preparation for first cut. A lot of problems with silage pits and leaking effluent, such as cracks in concrete or effluent channels blocked, can be caused by the silage clamp being filled to more than its capacity.

Take a look on Quattro's website - www.quattorubberandresin.co.uk at our resin & maintenance section. Or call our office on 01768 864977 for more information regarding which product would be suitable.

We are still working in line with Government guidelines regarding coronavirus. We have reduced staff in our office and our site men are working in smaller groups, minimising contact with clients at all times. Customers visiting the warehouse and office are required to wear masks at all times and sanitise hands regularly.
